About the Free Software Foundation (www.fsf.org)

The Free Software Foundation is a nonprofit with a worldwide mission to promote computer user freedom, defending the rights of all software users. Free software is software that gives users the freedom to share, study, and modify it. The software is free because the user is free to do with the software as they like. As a recognized authority on digital freedom, the Foundation's work spans from technology and educational resources to software licensing, hardware certification, and policy/advocacy efforts, touching the lives of millions of computer and software users across the globe every day.

The Foundation is home to the GNU Project, which resulted in the world's first free software operating system, GNU/Linux. The organization is further entrusted with thousands of software copyright assignments from individual developers and corporations, defending those licenses through monitoring and legal compliance. The Foundation also publishes the GNU General Public License (GPL), the world's most popular free software license, and maintains free public resources, including an online educational tutorial on email encryption and the Free Software Directory, a collectively maintained repository similar to Wikipedia of over 15,000 free software packages.

The FSF has been a registered 501(c)(3) in the United States since 1985, currently with thousands of individual supporters around the world, each contributing on average $200 a year. With over 80% of the organization's budget spent on programs, the FSF has the highest possible rating on independent nonprofit evaluator Charity Navigator — four stars and 100%.
